UPDATE: Guilford divests from Sabra

Meriwether Godsey will discontinue its purchase of Sabra hummus based on Guilford's ethical purchasing policy and the company's preference to serve homemade products. This would not have been possible without the support of the Guilford community. No official statements were made by Guilford acknowledging the Israeli apartheid; however, Students Allied Against Privilege and Supremacy and Students for Justice in Palestine look forward to continuing to challenge the Guilford administration to do so.

Respectfully,
SAAPS & SJP

A message from The Guilfordian

As The Guilfordian has previously reported, we have been working with a group of concerned students to improve communication between the Guilford community and donors. We have recently crafted a proposal to be presented to the Board of Trustees via the Student Affairs Committee in June.

This proposal is to create a committee of students who work closely with the Office of Advancement and the Alumni Association to assess the needs of the entire community and to encourage donations targeted towards meeting these needs.

Because our aim is to increase transparency surrounding the donation system, we are trying to make our own efforts transparent as well. We invite everyone to view the submitted proposal on our website.

Farewell Sarah!

Professor of History Sarah Malino is retiring after teaching at Guilford for 34 years and serving as a valued mentor to faculty and students alike. She will be missed!

"Sarah has been a great mentor and friend for over twenty years. ... She combines high academic standards with a deep concern for students' lives and welfare. And as she has pioneered the teaching of the history of women, she has shown us the need to investigate the lives of people placed on the margins by previous historians and our cultural norms."

-Tim Kircher, professor of history

"Sarah takes with her a great deal of institutional memory and experience that the college will be poorer for having lost. ... What she did as a woman, in earning her doctorate in the 1960s-70s, then teaching full-time while raising a wonderful family, is nigh impossible to fathom. So many forces were arrayed against her success and yet she persevered, all the while working to chart new territory for Women's Studies and new ways of approaching American history. Sarah also mentored me when I first came to Guilford as a young scholar, helping me to navigate the sometimes choppy waters of life at a small college. In that she was always considerate and compassionate."

-Alvin Dunn, assistant professor of history

"(Sarah) leaves such a large legacy to the College, seen in the department, her colleagues, and her students. ... One of her greatest contributions, among so many, was to make the history of women and the historical study of gender a part of the Guilford history curriculum. These topics are an accepted part of the way historians approach the past now, but Sarah forwarded them as a topic of inquiry when many dismissed these topic. Hers was a courageous stand."

-Phil Slaby, assistant professor of history
