

THE GOOFORDIAN

CLASSES CANCELLED

Budget cuts render Guilford College an events venue

COOL STUFF
BY AUBREY KING
THE PLEDGE

We have all heard the rumors. Guilford is in trouble. Financial problems have plagued the school for years, and now it is time to pay the bagpiper. The situation looked bleak, but the budget committee shocked the Guilford College community with a brave, ingenious solution: stop teaching classes.

"Just when all hope seemed lost, (Joe C. Utter) had a great idea," said budget committee member Jeremiah Spendmore. "He pointed out the obvious. We don't need to teach classes."

That's right. Starting April 13, Guilford College will no longer teach classes. Instead, Guilford will adopt the name Guilford Event Center and focus on the real moneymakers, special events.

"Why teach expensive classes when you can fill an

SEE CANCELLED | PAGE 7

MAP COURTESY OF MAPS.GUILFORD.EDU, PHOTOS BY ALISON DEBUSKY/GUILFORDIAN, GRAPHIC BY ALISON DEBUSKY, SARA MINSKY, MICHAELA BREGANS/GUILFORDIAN

Due to finances, the college's budget committee decided to shut down the school and transform the campus in to an event venue, changing Frank Hall to a stage for concerts and apartments into inns.