Announcing our new mission statement

Over the last few years, the editorial boards of The Guilfordian have felt that the mission statement was incomplete. Our dedication to this community goes beyond being simply informative and reliable. We work to keep a finger on the pulse of this community and to embody that pulse. Since our mission statement was last revised in 2007, Guilford has changed and the role of this newspaper has changed. To honor that change, we would like to formally announce our new mission statement.

We ask you, our friends and peers, to help us keep to our mission and to hold us accountable should we falter. With the publication of this statement, we hereby commit to the following.

The Guilfordian is the student-run newspaper of Guilford College. We are guided by the seven core values of our institution; community, diversity, equality, excellence, integrity, justice and stewardship. We shall always strive to remain true to the facts, to our community's ideals and to our mission.

Our mission is to:

- provide a high-quality, reliable, informative and entertaining forum for the exchange of ideas, information and creativity.
- fully inform the community of current news and events in a manner that is timely, accurate, fair and wholly factual
- enable a multitude of perspectives while moving away from the singular, disembodied voice that defines traditional journalism.
- craft our writing, videos, photos, and print and web design with awareness, intention and respect for diversity.
- bring to light the underreported and untold social justice stories happening at Guilford College, in Greensboro, across the United States and abroad.
- investigate and hold the College accountable to its commitment to the seven core values.
- promote dialogue between our organization and the Guilford College community to better serve our readership.
- constantly pursue greater education in journalism and the practice of social awareness.
