

Bishop Rondthaler Delivers His Fourth Lenten Address

His Subject: "Christ and the Soul"; He Stresses the Individual's Need of the Saviour and Christ's Interest in the Individual

Bishop Rondthaler made the last and one of the most interesting of his Lenten addresses at the Episcopal Chapel Service on Wednesday, April 6. His subject, "Christ and the Soul" came nearest to the individuality of the subject.

The most wonderful creation that God ever made, Bishop said, was the soul; for He made it in His own image for the lightest and most immortal purpose. He endowed human life, through the soul and its activities, with the most wonderful opportunities that could ever be given to a created being—opportunities of service. Women of all times have expressed their gratitude by taking advantage of the opportunities for service. Bishop cited as an example of the work of Frances Willard who had high ideals for the saving of human mankind. There have been some, however, who have had wonderful opportunities, but have not used them; as Marie Antoinette who had a large part in the oppression of the Huguenots.

The soul, Bishop stated, is the only immortal thing that will survive everything else on earth. The whole world will cease, but the soul will go on somewhere forever. Jesus Christ was the discoverer of the individual soul. On the occasion of one of his visits to Jerusalem, everything else in the story sinks into insignificance in comparison with his conversation with one man, Nicodemus. He led him to admit for himself a great truth which is now spread throughout all the world.

"For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Another instance of Jesus' individual interest in His dealing with the woman of Jacob's well. She had sunk down until she reached no chance for her. She had become only a drudge, poor, degraded, and ill-tempered, to whom no one would give a thought except the discoverer of human souls. He led her from drinking of the water of Jacob's well, to think of the Living Water, and sent her back to her work worth something.

The story of Mary sitting at the Master's feet has been an example for many women who have been worth much to their homes through prayer and Bible study. Mary's peering precious oneness in the Saviour's head was an individual act of gratitude which has been a blessing to thousands who have heard and read of it. Jesus explained how Christian love shall pass from the earthly sphere of living to the heavenly, immortal love.

Bishop told the story of Christ's healing Mary Magdalene as another instance of His interest in the individual soul. Mary Magdalene was a woman tormented by seven demoniac spirits, which drove her a wild woman. After Jesus drew the evil spirits out of her, she turned to Him with a deep love. She served Him dearly during his earthly ministry and was true to the last, standing as near as she could to the cross. At the tomb on Easter morning, Mary was present with the other women to pay her tribute. She remained in the garden after the others left and was the first to greet the risen Lord. Jesus sent her out with the others for him, and drew in the great procession of those who have gone about telling of Him, Mary leads the way.

Just as Jesus in his life on earth deals with the individual soul, He is still doing it today. He makes his followers happy and strong in doing what is right while for others. He really comes to each individual and seeks to enter his soul.

MacDowell Club Presents Picture

Excellent Picture, Accompanied By Appropriate Music Proves Delightful to Audience

On Saturday night, April 2, the MacDowell Club presented Thomas Meighan in his latest picture, "Blind Alibi." Mr. Meighan is supported by Greta Nissen and Evelyn Brent in this delightful melodrama.

The story is truly one of "coincidence." It begins in a South American city where the marriage of Captain Daniel Kirby (Thomas Meighan) and Rita de Alvarez Jorrett, Marquise takes place. The scene then shifts to New York where the vastness and rush of the metropolitan furnish the various complications which keep the bride away from her husband on their honeymoon. Evelyn Brent takes the role of Sally Ray who tries to come between the newly-weds. There are thrills and thrills—and then some more thrills.

The delightful music furnished by Joy Bowers and Julia Daniels added tremendously to the enjoyment of the picture.
