

Weinland Has Informal Class

By Marianne Everett

The philosophy students enjoyed a different kind of class—in Mr. Weinland's living room! It all began early one morning in class when Mr. Weinland blinked at us and said, "You know, this business of getting up by eight-thirty every morning is getting me down..." He invited us to his home for a class at eight p. m. Wednesday night. (And later he found out he was to have the early morning chapel Wednesday!)

We were greeted at the Weinland's front door by their black spaniel Bup (so named by David, Jr., who can't yet pronounce such tongue-twisters as "pup"). Since Mrs. Weinland had gone out, Mr. Weinland was nursemaid that night, and he was having trouble getting little Cathy to burp. She refused to go to sleep... probably because she's "on the ball," wondering what this old world's about anyway, and she wanted to join the philosophy circle. But finally Mr. Weinland took her upstairs...

In the living room there was a fire blazing on the hearth. Some girls nestled on the green rug in front of the fire. We balanced our notebooks on our knees, lit our cigarettes, and proceeded to "smoke it out."

The lesson was on Aristotle. We discussed his idea of ethics and his concept of Form. Mr. Weinland illustrated Aristotle's concept

Academy To Give Plays Tonight

The Dramatics Club of Salem Academy will present two plays, The Riders to the Sea, a tragedy, and Suppressed Desires, a comedy Friday night at 8:30. The admission will be twenty-five cents for students and faculty and thirty-five cents for visitors.

The cast for The Riders to the Sea is as follows: Elinor Robinson, Maurya; Martha Funk, Nora; Betty Lassiter, Cathleen; and Mary Norton, Bartley. The cast of Suppressed Desires is composed of Jean Sloan, Henrietta; Mary Spangh, Stephen; and Natalie Goodman, Mable.

of form with a story of William Zorack, the Modern American sculptor, who saw the potentialities of a statue of a sleeping cat in a rounded hunk of granite.

We sat on the floor thinking of the four phases of development presented by Aristotle, while we rubbed the floppy ears of Bup. For an hour we talked Aristotle in this informal atmosphere.

When Mrs. Weinland came home she served tea with pretzels and toll house cookies while we listened to Tchaikowsky's Fifth Symphony. The conversation got around to modern art, and Mr. Weinland told us of the French mule, A. Baronelli, that painted a "masterpiece" in Modern Art with his tail!

Campus By Day And Night

By Henrietta Walton

Campus Sights: the sad faces as "Ruby" was taken off by the dog catchers... the extended breakfast line from seven thirty 'til eight... the throng of music lovers at Dr. Vardell's recital... Alumnae touring the campus... Miss Anna's flower garden, always in fullest bloom... horseback-riders limping to class on the day after...

Faithful Bright always on the job... chattering girls who persist in talking during the Tuesday and Thursday assemblies... Miss Byrd en route to the tennis court... the changed expressions of the science majors as they lay down their bridge hands and answer the call of the 2:00 bell... a few eager athletes, always on the hockey field... the increase in attendance at the early morning chapel...

The smokehouse inhabitants doing the "Cariooca" and not knowing or caring what it's all about... three Clewellites wearing borrowed shoes while theirs are being repaired... the crowded street corner on Sunday morning before the bus for church arrives... four girls ambling along, each absorbed in her home town paper...

The undivided attention which Miss Covington held at Y Watch... the weather vane on the steeple of the Moravian Church... forty or more girls flocking into Bitting to receive instructions for their hospital work... the "comp" class on Thursday night giving the finishing touch to their weekly themes... Janet Russell's relieved look when at last she found her unknown... the still unimproved condition of Clewell's smokehouse... a bridge hand containing cards from three different decks to make up for the lost ones... the new white rug in room 122 Clewell...

Jean Pierce when she arose from a freshly painted chair... a fuzzy red caterpillar found on the walk in front of Bitting... the pink radio on second floor Clewell... the newly formed group of knitters and their production of wool socks... a man up in a tree behind Lehman, sawing steadily on a dead limb... the grave and serious look on all faces when six weeks tests are mentioned... a room full of girls hovering over a tiny radio—listening to a football game they couldn't attend... winter coats replacing jackets as fall gives way to winter... home economics majors and white uniforms... "Luke" Douthit posing for the art class on the steps of Bitting... three girls running from the Science Building on Friday afternoon in order to make their five o'clock bus.

Lablings Hear Walter Gains

Mr. Walter Gains, representative of the foil department of Reynolds Tobacco Company, spoke at the "Lablings" meeting Tuesday night. He discussed the vastness of the field of metals and their peace-time uses, as well as the value of the powerful electronic tube and the future uses of powdered metallurgy. The lecture was supplemented by samples and demonstrations, and a period of discussion and questions followed.

Preceding Mr. Geines' talk, the president, Nell Jane Griffith, presided over a short business meeting, in which the new secretary-treasurer, Margaret Williams, was elected.

Chocolate milk, chicken salad sandwiches, and chocolate cakes were served, and the meeting adjourned.
