

Head of art for May Day, Sheena Woods puts finishing touches on the flamingos which will be used in the pageant program.

Woods Finds Imagination Helpful In Directing May Day Art Work

Sheena Warren Woods, chairman of the art work for the May Day pageant, has found that her position requires, perhaps more than any other one thing, imagination. A senior art major, Sheena will be giving her Senior Art exhibit beginning May 15. The exhibit will be in the Day Student Center.

This summer she plans to join her husband, Jimmy, in Hawaii where he is stationed with the Army. These days Sheena is wearing the same thing because she is only allowed to take 66 pounds of clothing on the plane and her wardrobe is gradually getting smaller and smaller. The Woods will be living in Hawaii for about three years.

When asked how she felt about this year's May Day, Sheena said, "I think it will be the best one in my four years at Salem. One of the reasons it will be the best is because fewer people are in charge of art, choreography, and costumes."

Sheena has assumed almost all her committee's work for herself, and doorsprings.

with additional help from Martha Jo Patten and Betty Black. And, according to Nancy Umberger, Chairman of May Day, "The props are the best we've ever had . . . simply adorable. Sheena has put a lot of hard work into them." The fourth floor of Main Hall, Sheena's workshop amid the mice and heat, is really an exhibition of her imaginative work: gigantic playing cards, flamingoes, and a rose tree made of such unlikely materials as chicken wire, rope, paint, lead pipe, and doorsprings.

Journalist's Dilemma

By Robbin Causey

You read and read and read some more—
Your eyes are red and you can't see.
It must be faultless, nothing wrong,
But how perfect can a mere man be?

What's the grammar ruling here
And how does he spell his name?
How do you spell "convertible"?
THEY cry your errors, not your fame.

Then the galley comes at last,
And you must read again
The same old words, the same old stuff;
With luck, you'll catch your sins.

It happens, though, more oft than not,
A few will pass you by.
The READERS laugh; you see your flaws
And pray to improve your eye.

Elaine Tayloe, as chairman of "Bricks, Books and All That," announced some of the changes to be made in that book. She noted that a two-year supply will be printed, making a saving of more than $100 for student government.

On May 1 at 5:00 p.m., the first meeting of the 1963 Orientation Committee will be held in room 104, Main Hall.

Elections of presidents of the following dormitories were held Wednesday, April 24, in the respective dorms: Bitting, Strong, Lehman, South, and Sisters'.

On Friday, April 26, members of Legislative Board will send incoming freshmen copies of "When a Girl Accepts Salem . . ."
