

Mangum Promotes News With "Lamp Of Learning"

"Imaginative!" "You must be kidding!" "Inspiring!" "Bold!" "In Greensboro?"

Comments received thus far by the Greensboro Chamber's Centennial Decade Advisory Committee clearly indicate that the Lamp of Learning monument to be erected in Dunning Park will be highly controversial.

A clay model was shown at the recent 18th General Membership Conference and a few members minced no words in expressing disapproval. But most liked it.

The comments recall similar controversies over sculptures in Atlanta and Chicago. A 33-foot high fiber glass sculpture in Atlanta's Peachtree Center Plaza, designed by Belmont-born sculptor Robert Hechtling, has evoked considerable discussion since it was completed two years ago. During recent weeks, a similar controversy--with "what is it" overtones--has aroused Chicago where a 163-ton, five-story-tall sculpture by Pablo Picasso rises from Chicago's Civic Center Plaza.

The Lamp of Learning sculptor is Earl Heel artist William Mangum. He was commissioned by Dunning Industries, Inc., a Greensboro lamp manufacturer, with the assistance of the Chamber's Centennial Decade Advisory Committee, and the soon-to-be completed 500-pound sculpture will be unveiled late this fall.

Dunning Park, where it will be located, has been leased by Dunning Industries from the city and is being beautified with help from other companies. Duke Power Company and Southern Bell Telephone Company are putting their wires underground in the area and Duke Power is contributing the display lighting of the monument. Piedmont Natural Gas Company has installed some gas lamps at the park entrances and Thomas Tree Service whose President is chairman of the Chamber's Greensboro Beautiful Committee will landscape the park as a public service.

The metal sculpture, which will be between five and six feet high, on top of a pedestal, was commissioned by Dunning Industries and the Centennial Decade Advisory Committee (1) to provide a stimulus to Greensboro's further downtown development, (2) to stimulate cultural activity in observance of the Chamber's Centennial Decade, (3) to provide a monument to Greensboro's colleges and universities, (4) to help to bring the businessman and the artist closer together in the development of Greensboro's cultural life. John M. Dunning, III, president of Dunning Industries, Inc., was recently selected as North Carolina's Small Business Man of the year. He is also the recipient of the Greensboro Chamber's first Quarterly Beautification Award.

"It's personally and professionally rewarding to me to know that an artist of Mangum's high reputation is spending so much energy in developing an idea for us," said Dunning. He thanked the Chamber's Centennial Decade Advisory Committee for the commission and providing cultural leadership in Greensboro.

Artist Mangum is an associate professor of Salem College's Art Department. He teaches sculpture, painting and art history at the Winston-Salem institution.

It is expected that City of Greensboro street plans will affect the park area and when it does, the monument will be removed to another suitable location, possibly right smack in the middle of Greensboro's downtown.

The Dunning park site is adjacent to the Dunning plants in the wedge where Ashe and Lewis Streets intersect Lee Street.

The monument's inscription will include a tribute to Greensboro's two universities and three colleges, with a notation of their founding dates. Aluminum for the sculpture is being provided by General Metals, Inc., a Greensboro metal fabricator, which is headed by Saunders Williams, a member of the Chamber's Arts Acquisition and Centennial Decade Advisory Committee. The foundry work will be done by Brogden Foundry, a small Greensboro foundry which specializes in custom work.

Scandal! Men Discovered In Salem College Dorm

He's everywhere! He's everywhere! One evening, as the junior gazed into the eyes of the man above her, she shrieked as his shoulder brushed against her cheek. She pushed him against the wall, and reached for the scotch tape to put him back in his proper place. It must be nice to be one of the fortunate Salem girls who have Paul Newman gazing down at them as they sleep.

Startled by the reflection in the mirror, a sophomore gasps and grabs for her robe. There he is again, with his deep blue eyes staring at her as he leans against her wall. He appears again next door with a different outfit, but with those same blue eyes.

This appears to be the most popular man on campus. Paul Newman, actor, man, and BOD, makes any drab, green Salem wall worth looking at. But, he fits in anywhere, since those blue eyes and rippling muscles go with every decor. By all means, he is a worthwhile addition to any wall, ceiling, or door.

Life-sized photos have aroused Salem's passion for Paul. However, Paul is not the only man around--since "The Great Escape", Steve McQueen has also made the scene.

Boyfriend's 9x12 photographs certainly seem dull when placed before wall-to-wall sex appeal--oops, posters.

Even travel posters of Spanish matadors poised for the kill are fast losing appeal now that the new art(?) craze favors the "grubby tee-shirt" look. And incidentally, this is the only legal way to have men in your room!

ATTENTION

The Sophomore Class is still taking orders for Salem lapboards. Anyone interested should contact Claudia Young. Hurry, for only ten are left.

Petition Considers Negotiations As Solution To Vietnam Conflict

A campaign for names in the Winston-Salem area of those favoring negotiation between all parties concerned in the Vietnamese conflict is being sponsored by a national citizen's organization called "Negotiation Now!"

The organization hopes to have one million signatures to the petition by October 9 when the executive committee of "Negotiation Now!" will present it to President Johnson.

The petition states that:

We support the call by U Thant for new initiatives to bring about negotiations among all parties to the conflict leading to a political settlement of the Vietnam War.

We call upon the United States, the most powerful nation in the world, to take the first step and end the bombing of North Vietnam now and without conditions. We ask our government to take further initiatives leading to a standstill truce. We ask North Vietnam and the National Liberation Front to respond affirmatively to any new United States initiatives and to join with the U. S. in a standstill ceasefire.

We ask South Vietnam to respect and join in these steps.

This course of action presents to the United States a moral alternative to our stated policy of bringing about negotiations by force, or to the devastation of all-out war, and a more realistic alternative than unilateral withdrawal.

We believe that such initiatives now can break the impasse and lead to negotiations and a political settlement providing for the removal of all foreign troops and for genuinely democratic elections in which all South Vietnamese can participate freely.

"Negotiation Now!" is not a religious organization nor is it backed by any certain political organization or ideology. It is, however, a citizens' organization backed by a varied cross-section of Americans who wish to show the President that there would be considerable popular support for this policy.

Fulbright Means Future For Capable Salemites

The competition for United States Government grants for graduate study or research, or for study and professional training in the creative and performing arts abroad in 1968-69, is nearing a close.

The awards are available under the Fulbright-Hays Act as part of the educational and cultural exchange program of the U. S. Department of State. The program, administered by the Institute of International Education, is intended to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and other countries, and provides more than eight hundred grants for study in 52 countries.

Candidates who wish to apply for an award must be U. S. citizens at the time of application, have a bachelor's degree or its equivalent by the beginning date of the grant and, in most cases, be proficient in the language of the host country. Selections will be made on the basis of academic and/or professional record, the feasibility of the applicant's proposed study plan and personal qualifications. Preference is given to candidates who have not had prior opportunity for extended study or residence abroad.

Two types of grants are available through IIE under the Fulbright-Hays Act: U. S. Government Full Grants, and U. S. Government Travel Grants.

A full award will provide a grant with tuition, maintenance for one academic year in one country, round-trip transportation, health and accident insurance and an incidental allowance.

Countries participating in the full grant program will be: Afghanistan, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium-Luxembourg, Bolivia, Brazil, Ceylon, Chile, China (Republic of), Colombia Costra Rica, Denmark, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland,

Renovations -

There are also new paneled Student Government and student publications offices located beneath the student center. The old Student Government offices were located in the Babcock kitchen, which kept the kitchen from being used for its intended purpose. The student publication offices had been beneath the Day Student Center which is now being used by NSA.

Thursday freshmen took it easy as the upperclassmen fought over courses and registration. The Opening Convocation commenced with the academic procession of the faculty and the entrance of the Class of 1968 in cap and gown.

As a treat for the returning students and as a means of introducing a few of the freshmen, May Day sponsored a fashion show during dinner. Later that night, Dean Wood entertained at an Open House in Strong Friendship Room.

Friday marked the real beginning of another academic year and essentially, the end of Orientation. However, a few activities remained--primarily the Handbook test on Tuesday night. Sunday night the Class of 1971 was officially inducted into membership in the campus YWCA chapter, and tomorrow, they will be officially inducted into the life of a student at an all-girl college--they'll leave campus for a mixer at Davidson organized by IRS.
