

Home Ec Club Increases Zeal; Selects Officers, More Projects

"Grow Toward Professionalism" is this year's theme for the Home Economics Club. Several interesting guest speakers are planned for the coming months, and new projects are being created within the club.

As a part of the club's growing enthusiasm, several new committees have been established, and in addition to the officers elected last spring, Claire Haines will serve as Parliamentarian; Brandy Aiken, the new state treasurer of the College Chapters Section of the North Carolina American Home Economics Association, will head the refreshment committee; Martha Gomer will coordinate the plans of the project committee, and Jane Adams will be in charge of Publicity.

Dr. Helen Canaday, associate professor of Home Economics at Greensboro Women's College reinforced the club's excitement over its coming projects. In her speech November 14, at the club's monthly meeting, Dr. Canaday pointed out the need for home economists in all fields of employment. She particularly stressed the service of home economists in the areas of education and experimentation.

Although a specialist in Child Care and Development, Dr. Canaday said that the greatest service of the home economist was in the realm of total human needs. Through betterment of the home, home economists are able to improve goods and services, further national aims, and increase good international relationships.

Because this field of study involves so many areas of knowledge, Dr. Canaday could only mention the many professions open to the graduate in Home Economics. Teaching, family relations, child care, nutrition, dietetics, interior design, textiles, and advertising are but a few of the vital roles played by the professional home economist of tomorrow.

innocent civilians. Mr. Kelly seemed to equate our accidental killings of the civilians with the deliberate killings of civilians by the Viet Cong.

(5) Surely, the refugee camps are filled with two groups—those people fleeing from Viet Cong terrorists and those people whom our forces consider sympathetic to the Viet Cong. Why should we not try to isolate the population which will fight against us?

(6) Father O'Connor, in referring to our expectations from the Saigon government, merely pointed out the many unfounded criticisms which refuted the consensus of American officials sent to Vietnam to determine the government's policies. Again, he was merely attempting to point out the inconsistencies of reports on the Vietnam situation and the importance of basing facts on knowledge and context.

(7) Fighting against Communism in Asia or fighting to preserve the independence of South Vietnam is one and the same according to U. S. policy. The South Vietnamese definitely want independence, or there would be no war; and the U. S., in hoping to combat Communism, would like to see the South Vietnamese objective won.

We appreciate the fact that the U. S. position in Vietnam was presented by an informed person. And we also appreciate Mr. Kelly's stand against the war and his offer to provide transportation to the Post Office for students wishing to protest the war. Mr. Kelly is following Father O'Connor's advice in using responsible criticism to explain his position. However, we feel that, likewise, Mr. Kelly should appreciate the Chaplain's position in our involvement in the Vietnam War.

As students, we would like to take a more responsible position on the war. In answer to Mr. Kelly's suggestion for a Seminar on Vietnam second semester, we think that it would be a valuable asset to us.

Dear Editor:

I read in my Salemite that a Mr. Pendleton, a humorist, suggested to our students that "faith in God may rid mind of worry." Not being a humorist myself, I would also suggest the alternative: that you may rid your mind of worry by ridding it of faith in God. But then maybe your god doesn't haunt you.

Salem Receives Grant From Sears Foundation

Salem College and Wake Forest University have received grants from the Sears-Roebuck Foundation under a continuing program of aid to privately supported colleges and universities.

Salem has received an unrestricted grant of $1,000; Wake Forest, an unrestricted grant of $2,500.

John D. Clark, the Winston-Salem representative of the foundation, said 19 participating colleges and universities in North Carolina will share in grants totaling $24,500. Nationally, unrestricted grants totaling $1 million will be distributed.

The purpose of the program is to help institutions of higher learning systematically meet their financial needs.

Altogether, more than six hundred colleges and universities from coast to coast will receive Sears Foundation grants. They are unrestricted to allow the schools to allocate their funds according to their greatest needs.

In addition to its grant program, the foundation will invest nearly $900,000 this year in a variety of education programs, bringing its total expenditures for higher education to approximately $1.9 million.
