CO-OPERATION

Is it too much to ask the students of Bailey High School to support in every way their school? The needs and qualities of any good school are found here in our school.

We, through co-operation, have found that only on special occasions is there need to leave our school grounds to purchase essential school supplies. Special care has been given that no student go without equipment, as ink, paper, pencils, paste, and so forth are sold at regular prices.

Sincerely the juniors appreciate the fine spirit of school co-operation shown in the support to their store. They deeply appreciate the support received, yet they realize there are some students who haven't become properly acquainted with this store. Please show your appreciation by helping to make this store possible.

May I recall that the profit from this store will go toward making possible the Junior-Senior Banquet.

When the elementary students come near the end of their high school, they, too, will be trying to further any cause that might in any way be beneficial to them.

Remember, please, to assist your school; for, after all, you are a part of it.

IMPROVEMENTS

There have been two great improvements made around the school this year.

First, the appearance of the grounds has been made much better. The homely looking row of shrubs in front of the school building has now been removed and neatly arranged around the gymnasium and agricultural building.

Second, a change in the library system has proved to be much better. Since it has been arranged so that each grade has a certain period to go to the library, one who goes for reference work finds a quiet room in which he is able to study.

Both improvements, in the grounds and in the library, make the school a much more desirable place for both teachers and pupils to spend six hours each school day.

TOO MANY ABSENCES

Boys and girls of our high school, we can not realize what misfortunes we are bringing upon ourselves by staying out of school. If we lose a teacher, it will decrease the number of subjects given, decrease the number of club activities that we have the chance of taking part in, and lower the standard of our school.

I know you remember in previous years having class with a study hall at the back of the room. Of course, the students in study hall were steadily moving and talking, and the attention of the class was diverted. We did not accomplish nearly as much last year as we have this year with no study hall in our class room.
