Girls' basketball team of 1939-1940 has had a very successful season so far, winning all games played within the county.

The only set back was in the Gold Leaf Tournament of Wake County played at Wendell. In the final the girls were set back by Garner one point.

The moral of the team is very high, a fact attributed as the cause of the success of the team.

The guards on the team, Pearl Lamm, Lois Johnson, and Louise Brantley, regulars, have been one of the greatest cogs in the team. They are alert and dependable, keeping the ball always returned to the excellent forwards; Helen Jordan, Maebelle Bissette, Estelle Eatman. The subs, Josephine Lamm, Joyce Wiggs, and Mary Elizabeth Jones, acting as sub guards, and Marie Morgan, Rachel Jones, Isabelle Vick, acting as sub forwards, have made creditable showing.

Bailey's defending champions will be in the county tournament fighting to up hold their record.

LITERARY MAP OF NORTH CAROLINA

Eunice Peele

The English unit of Colorful Carolina was instructed by Mr. Inscoc to make a literary Map of North Carolina to go on exhibit at the State Teachers' Meeting, Raleigh, March 15-18.

The members of this unit prepared radio programs on five writers: Mrs. Harris, a novelist; O. Henry, a short story writer; John Charles McNeil, a poetry writer; W. T. Couch, and essay writer; and Paul Green, a play writer.

The map is 18 inches by 42 inches. The color scheme of the map follows the colors of the North Carolina flag, red, white, and blue with a touch of yellow. Bordering the map are colored miniature books written by present day North Carolina writers. Living authors and their fields of work are only used on this map.

In one corner two scrolls containing famous quotations about literature bind and emblem symbolic of literature- book, ink, pen, dictionary, and paper. In another corner there appears the state flag and seal.

On the map are written in red ink the names of all present day writers of North Carolina and their respective field of work as fiction, biography, poetry, history, and so forth.

The plans and ideas were devised by Mrs. A. H. Farmer, and drawing was done by Eunice Peele.
