

SARAH MORGAN REPORTS NEW YORK TRIP

New York! What wonders the word invisions! It's a word that challenges the desire of every American—a desire to some day visit this metropolis. At last my dream is a reality. I have been to New York!

After taking what is called the "grand" tour around the city of New York and having the outstanding places pointed out to me, I found that almost everything was different from the way I had pictured. Along the water front we stopped to look at the Statue of Liberty, which through the fog looked as if it needed cleaning. Into my throat came a funny lump as I thought of the people who had seen it from the other side. While down on the water front we glimpsed the Normandy, the French luxury liner that has been docked in America since the beginning of the war. There were numerous British ships, in all probability loading food and medical supplies. Passing a small boat, we were told that the survivors of the Ark Royal came on it. We visited Grant's tomb copied from Napeleon's. Here there were several busts of famous generals. Among these was General Sherman, famous only for his march through the South. Being a southerner, I could not appreciate this opportunity. The tour included Harlem, Chinatown, and the Bowery. We saw nothing exciting in these districts; although it was said murders were staged at times in Chinatown for the visitors benefit.

During the next days I rode in subways, underground trains traveling at a terrific speed; ate in automats—restaurants with no waiters, where food is obtained by compartments resembling post-office boxes (you drop in a coin and the door opens); went to the world famous Music Hall in Radio City; and saw America's greatest actress--Helen Hayes in "Candle in the Wind." After all this I returned without a Yankee accent and with no desire to live there, even though I wouldn't have missed the trip for anything.

GAS
20c
PER GALLON
PURE

VISIT THE NEW SANITARY
LUNCH ROOM AT E. J. HIGH'S service station

EAT THOSE DELICIOUS

hot dogs-----8c
hamburgers----10c
ham sandwiches-10c
barbecue sand-10c
cheeseburgers--10c

CURB SERVICE

Mr. Howton: What is the plural for deer?
Boy: Dears--those that have more than one.

VISIT
HEILIG AND MEYERS
"THE MODERN FURNITURE STORE"
"People expect more and get more at Heilig and Meyers" 113-115 BARNES ST.
WILSON, N. C.