

AN EDUCATED MAN

The educated man, realizing he still has much to learn, uses all opportunities for increasing his knowledge. No one is mocked by him, for he is tolerant of all men and their opinions. He appreciates Nature and the finer things of life. Putting into practice what he has learned by experience, he is able to think out his problems clearly.

Why I'm Glad That I'm An American

I'm glad I'm an American for the same reason all of the poor, war-stricken children wish they were Americans. We Americans are a democracy-loving people, believing that all men were and are created equal. We believe that our government is for the people, by the people, and of the people.

The small things are very important. Being able to listen to any radio program we wish and reading any news papers we want to without being in the constant fear of being apprehended and shot for such trivial things are privileges that make us proud.

We are given fair trials, and if we are not able to hire a lawyer, the jury or judge will assign one.

TRUE EASE IN WRITING COMES FROM ART, NOT CHANCE,
AS THOSE MOVE EASIEST WHO HAVE LEARNED TO DANCE.

We have many small luxuries which are taken for granted by many, but we must learn to do without these. We must buy defense savings bonds and stamps to help keep our country free. We must be economical with silks, rubber, and the other things that have to be imported here in our own America. The liberal distribution of these products was all right when our factories were occupied with nothing more important than producing luxuries, but now the defense work is much more important; and we should consider, in fact, we have to consider our own safety and be very careful.

I am sure I can say for one and all I'M PROUD I'M AN AMERICAN.

MY IDEAS OF AN EDUCATED MAN

To have knowledge of all the books of the world would not make an educated man. If one can talk to all classes of people, all races of people, sympathetically and understandingly, and know a little of every subject, he has gone far in the field of education.
