

Freshmen Think - Initiation Begins

The high school marched into the auditorium. CRASH!

Dust flew and all the girls except the freshmen covered their curls. They whispered to each other, "Is this initiation?"!

"Someone's trying to murder us!"

"I don't think I'll come to chapel anymore if the auditorium is capable of falling in!"

"We must be having an air raid!"

Then as Mrs. T. Farmer went tiptoeing through the fallen plaster, unharmed, all fears subsided.

It Is Up To Us (THEME)

Since you and I have been brought up in a world of plenty, comparatively speaking, we can't adjust ourselves to the idea of sacrifices. While we were growing up we knew not the meaning of the word shortage. But now we are faced with a different situation. So many of the things we have come to look upon as necessities are suddenly to be had no more. We are called upon to make sacrifices that interfere with what has been called "Our good American way." And we are so concerned with having to do without those little commodities that we have not yet considered the threatened shortage of liberty and freedom and other fundamentals of democracy. If we are to win this war, we must change our attitude regarding things we are called upon to do without. It's up to us.
