"SPLASHY" OUR ALLIGATOR

We have a real live alligator in our room. Billie Fay Perry brought him from an alligator farm in Florida. He is three weeks old and is twelve inches long. He eats fish. We like to watch him splash in the water.

The children in the third grade are making toy saddle horses.

Alligators Prove Interesting Study

On our study of alligators, we have learned many things about them. They are found in China and in tropical America as far north as Florida. They live in fresh water streams and bask in the sun on the ground.

The alligators usually lay from three to five dozen eggs, though there may be as many as two hundred. The baby alligators are about eight inches long at birth. They live on the average about forty years. The bright yellow marks disappear with growth, leaving them dull gray or black.

Alligators feed on fish, birds, and animals. Their powerful jaws and sharp teeth can easily crush a man's arm or leg. Their powerful tails are strong enough to knock a human being down. In winter they bury themselves in mud.

BEGINNERS PLAY STORE

The First Grade Beginners are playing store. Since Jimmie Harris and Carroll Jones are the store keepers, the store was named "Harris's and Jones's Grocery Store!"

The pupils are gaining many benefits in playing store. They are learning their additive and subtractive facts in addition to many social courtesies in a practical way. They must add the cost of their purchases and also the points on the rationed foods. They must be able to subtract to make change.

The Beginners think it is great fun playing store.

TEN COMMANDMENTS STUDIED

The third grade pupils are learning the Ten Commandments. Irene Glover, Jerilyn Lancaster, and Eunice Perry said them perfectly Friday. Their teacher took them to the drug store at lunch.
