

Sophomore Boy Spends Few Months In Puerto Rico Last Fall

J. E. Edwards is a traveling boy from what we can hear from him. Information reveals that he has lived in several parts of North Carolina, and in New Jersey and Puerto Rico.

Of all places he has ever lived, Puerto Rico is the most interesting. He attended school there and had one American teacher, the others were Spaniards. Behind the school was a sugar factory, the largest on any territory of the United States.

Native huts were of straw built low in the ground because of hurricans which occur frequently. Their children go nude until they get around twelve years of age. Except for December and January, when it becomes a little cool, the wboather is really hot. Snakes do not exist, but lizards grow as large as aligators.

Native food consists chiefly of goats meat, shark meat, coconut meat, and canned vegetables. As a whole Puerto Rico is very unsanitary.

J. E.'s father was a government engineer on a naval airbase construction job.

His father when ready to return home had tickets for both an airplane and a boat. Since the plane left two days before the boat, he took the plane. The boat he would have taken was sunk on the way to the United States.

J. E. states that he would like living in Puerto Rico all right.

CORN CONTEST

Farmers, 4-H members, and F. F. A. boys are eligible to enter the five-acre corn contest.

For the best crop in the community a $25 war bond will be given and a $50 bond for the best in the county.

WILSON THEATRE

SUNDAY & MONDAY

WHISTLING IN BROOKLYN
RED SKELTON-ANN RUTHERFORD

TUESDAY & WEDNESDAY

IN DUE TIME

PAUL HENRIED - IDA LUPINO

THURSDAY, FRIDAY, & SATURDAY

PURPLE HEART

WILLIAM BENDIX, DONALD BARRY

RICHARD CONTE