

NEWS FROM OUR PRINCIPAL

GRADUATION

Graduation time has come around again and the seniors are approaching the occasion with mingled feelings of joy and regret. Joy comes from having completed a job well, from having attained a goal set eleven years ago, from having persevered to the finish, from having had a wide association with both students and teachers. Regret comes from having to leave old friends and acquaintances from having to pull away from the social life and the activities of the school, from having to "grow up" and start out on one's own.

YOUNG MEN

During these times of stress and strain one hardly knows what to say to a graduating class. To the young men, many of whom the army will soon call, may you serve your country and yourselves well. May you be a credit to your school and may your conduct reflect nothing but honor upon your name. May you be brought safely through this entirely new experience, whole in mind, in spirit, and in body. To those of you who do not get the call, find a place in the world in which you can serve. To all of you, may I urge that you continue your schooling whenever and wherever possible.

YOUNG LADIES

To the young ladies of the class, there are thousands upon thousands of calls for service today. Keep uppermost in your minds your continued education. Wherever possible continue your schooling until you have prepared yourselves for lives which will be useful and beautiful. To those of you who will find it impossible to attend college, find your place in other fields of activity and do the very best job you are capable of doing. In every case, I hope that your stay here in Bailey high school will have meant much to you.

QUALITIES

It has been my privilege to work with you only one year. In that time I have learned to admire you greatly. There are qualities of leadership, citizenship, and sportsmanship which you have demonstrated during the year that have caused me to swell with pride for you. There have been instances of unpleasantness as could be expected. If we have profited by them, they have not been in vain.

My congratulations to you on graduation day and may your every noble effort be crowned with success.
