

Sweaters Still Hold Own In School

Sarah Whitley

What's on your minds, girls? Fashions, of course. Well, I'm here to tell you what's the latest.

First, let's discuss sweaters. They're still national favorites. This year, however, cardigans are no longer stylish when worn buttoned down the back. The newest idea is to button them in front (and aren't our parent's glad!) or, when wearing with a blouse, fasten only the top button. The colors are as gay as ever with lavender leading.

JEWELRY

Next, in importance is jewelry. Well, gals, wear all the silver bracelets you can pile on your right arm (but be sure they are silver) and leave the left for your identification bracelet.

SADDLES

Some saddles are back on the market! Maybe you will be lucky enough to get a pair. But no matter what kind of tie oxford you wear, don't forget to use colorful shoe laces. And change 'em to match your costume. The modern manner of lacing begins at the top, tied with a saucy bow at the bottom.

No laces? Use ribbons. Then watch every one follow your lead.

SENIOR MINATURES

By Evelyn Rooker

Recent survey of the senior ambitions reveals a large variation among the forty-one students. Fields of interests included in the named aspirations are teaching, engineering, nursing, dramatics, art, journalism, radio, science, aviation, business courses, and merchandising. Millard Lamm desires most to finish school.

BASKETBALL SUITS

Basketball is beginning to disclose a prosperous future for the forthcoming season. Seniors receiving suits are Melba Stott, Sally L. Perry, Susie Boykin, Millard Lamm, Linwood Vick, James Haskins, J. C. Lamm, Theibert Glover, and Lloyd Stott.

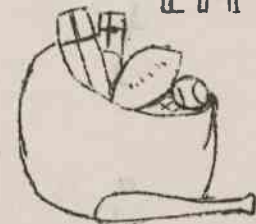

Two of our classmates have recently been absent from school due to illness, Herbert Morgan, who underwent an operation at Duke, and Mae Jordan, now recuperating from an appendectomy. Last week the senior class selected its commencement invitation and personal cards.
