

SCRIBBLING SCRIBES

Excerpts From Themes

MUSIC

I love every line of song and music. The sound of voices blended together in song is more beautiful than anything I have ever heard or seen.

There are many types of music and songs, but each of them has beauty and loveliness within itself.

Songs talk and tell stories of people and events. They tell it in a lovelier way than any person on God's earth could tell it. Music draws the sadness from me and fills me with joy. G. Boykin

FLOWERS

To me their blossoms are like small faces that smile all through the day. They dance about in the wind like small children at play; they smile and laugh and whisper secret messages. B.F. Vick

SPRING

Spring of all the seasons is to me the most beautiful. It is the time when flowers start peeping from their winter sleep. Soon they burst forth into bloom, all beautiful lords and ladies of color and beauty.

Marlyn Lancaster

FREEDOM

I am thankful for the privilege of living in a free country and sharing the four freedoms: the freedom of speech, the freedom of worship, the freedom from fear, and the freedom from want. To abuse these four freedoms means sure and fatal dictatorship in the future.

Living in a democracy is a privilege I cherish. Sometimes we often forget that preserving our freedom is preserving our right to the best happiness in the world.

P. Brannon

NATURE

I love to walk in the forest and watch the birds flying about, the trees nodding and whispering to each other, the squirrels and rabbits scurrying here and there and the brook tumbling over rocks in its path.

Both Bissette

UNCONTROLLED AMBITION

Having ambition is encouraging to a successful career if controlled by good motives. In the life of Macbeth, however, ambition without self-control led to his destruction. Weakness of his once noble character allowed evil influences to entangle him till, the more he tried to secure safety and peace, the faster he was tied. Desire for power blinded him to all sense of honesty.
