Bugle Demands

the stencils have been proofread and errors corrected, they are mimeographed, requiring between each page the insertion by hand of slip sheets that must be removed later.

To address the envelopes for the copies to be mailed falls next in line. Then after placing stacks of each page in order on tables, the members of the staff march round and round, taking a page off each pile, thus having the Bugle together at the end of the line except for the final stapling.

All is now complete except the wrapping of mailing copies and the writing of names on copies delivered to each room and town subscribers.

The class periods immediately following the publishing of the Bugle are devoted to noting the errors and discussing methods of improvement.
