

Principal's Column

WHAT WAS YOUR CONDUCT GRADE LAST MONTH? Did it improve or was it worse? Who was responsible for the low grade if you got one? What were some of the causes for low grades? Answers to the above questions will help you to improve your conduct grades for the next reporting period.

CONDUCT

Many students had lower conduct grades on their last reports than formerly. A few had improved grades. If you noticed your report card you are graded on "Attitude and Conduct". The attitude part brings in many considerations. Some of the causes for the lower grades were: 1. Noise in halls between classes. 2. Noise in classrooms. 3. Wearing caps in the building. 4. Running in the halls. 5. General attitude of "do nothing". 6. Failure to take advantage of class periods and study halls. 7. Leaving school without permission. If any of the above reasons apply to you, it would be fine if you could change them and make a better citizen for our school. Good order is maintained in most of our classrooms. We would like for all students to learn to change classes quietly. No one judges you on your ability, quality, citizenship, studiousness, or other good traits on the amount of noise you keep. May I implore you to be more quiet in the hall.

Another thing in our school which needs to be cleaned up is the noise the students make while entering the building when coming in on a late bus. If you will just stop and think, you will see how unnecessary the noise is and how it breaks into the work of the students and teachers who are already in the building.

Remember, your privileges end where the other person's rights begin. A loud person is not necessarily an able person.

Remember, also, girls on the questionnaire for entrance to training for nursing this question is always found: "Is she lady-like or loud? We need to calm down. Your school is judged by you. Are you giving it a good name or a bad one?"
