Former Bugle Staff Members Continue Work In Journalism

SARAH MORGAN FARMER, '43, former editor of the Bugle is now editor of the Echo, Greensboro College annual.

Last year Sarah wrote articles for the Greensboro afternoon paper and the Christian Advocate. She was, also, on the staff of the college paper.

SIDNEY JONES, former staff member of the Bailey Bugle, plans to enter Tulane University, New Orleans, La., beginning in January, 1947. He intends to major in journalism, specializing in Radio and News Sequence. This past summer Sidney was offered the position of reporter on the Goldsboro paper at $40 a week. Though the offer was "tempting", he refused, as it might keep him from going to college.

CHRISTINE FINCH, '43, who completed her college course at Cullowhee, is teaching commercial work and journalism in Bessemer City High. Although Christine had only journalism in high school, she is teaching this subject since that is a required assignment of the commercial department.

Other Alumni Interests

MARKS UNDERWOOD, '42, is now stationed in Wiesbaden, Germany. He has been classified as typist at the Headquarters of the Counter Intelligence Corps. He has sent back home several accounts of the present conditions in Germany and of trips to ancient castles and places of interest.

ALLISON FARMER, connected with the Bell Telephone Company, Washington, D. C., was one of the seven men called from over the United States to study in New York a plan of making long distance calls by dial.

MARTIN FINCH, '37, has entered Atlantic Christian College, majoring in Business administration. He returned from service last year.

RELLA PACE, '41 was married to Rev. Charlie Harrison, August 19, at the Christian Church in Wilson. Both are graduates of A. C. College. Rev. Harrison will get his doctor's degree at the University of Illinois soon. The couple have made their home in Bloomington, Illinois, where Rella will teach school and her husband will preach.
