

English II Completes Unit On Description

(BELOW ARE SENTENCES FROM DESCRIPTIVE PARAGRAPHS WRITTEN BY ENGLISH II. EDITOR)

These snow-trimmed trees cast shadows of motly grey upon the diamond-studded blanket.

Marlyn Lancaster

Like an old man who has bravely faced the storm of life, the sturdy pine whispers condolence to the weaker trees when the forest is rocked by blustery winds.

Evelyn Poole

The rain began to howl like a frightened dog, trees rocked back and forth, and raindrops pattered on the closed windows. Harder the rain fell and still harder the wind blew until even the earth shook. Then quickly all was still.

Beth Bissetto

The ocean, serene and azure blue the day before, had changed costumes overnight, wearing now a dull muddy coat.

Elsie Mae Rooker

Suddenly, glittering streams of sunrise color the once darkened waters, and brilliant reddish gleams dance along bobbing waves like colorful strands of ribbon flowing over a dark background.

J. Collie

Flickering like little lights turned on and off, it tumbles over waterfalls, a sprayed white cloud.

Millard Morgan

His hide was red-gold, smooth elastic muscles knotted on his stomach and neck, and his strong face revealed intelligence.

Bernease Eatmon

Huge dagger-like icicles hung from the roof's edge.

Billy Murray

Jack Frost, the man that turned everything gray-haired the night before, was retreating back to his unknown hiding place.

Frank Lewis

CRADLE ROLL

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Haskins announce the birth of a daughter, Margaret Jordan, on December 23, 1946. Mrs. Haskins is the former Juanita Jordan, '37.

Suits

Dresses

and at

The London Shop

WILSON N.C.

Start The

New

Year

Right By

Attending The

Sale Of

Coats,