Gabbing To Aid Treasury

WELL - LOOK

Ambitious Annie once undertook
To earn her living by hook
or crook;
And so her kitchen she forsook
Every day, in a shady nock
Where birds the blossoming branches shook,

Anyone who might care to look Would see our Annie, as she took Her pencil down beside the brook
To practice dash and dot
and hook.
Now, if I am not mistook,
Instead of being a pastry
cook,
Annie fills her pocketbook
With money earned by hook and crook!

Pansy Rae Bissette and Gladys Phillips, two second-year typing students, publish the Baptist Church Bulletin bimonthly.

Gladys does the mimeograph work and Pansy Rae, the typing.

Both girls are paid regular stenographic rates.

This work gives them practice in what they have learned at the same time that they are earning a little cash.

EXTRA CREDIT RECEIVED

Pansy Rae Bissette, Phyllis Finch and Gladys Phillips were exempted from their exam because of their extra work.

Ninth girls set fines for speaking out of turn on class meetings.

On these meetings, each girl must pay one cent for each time she is found speaking out of turn. If fines aren't paid off the day after, they are increased to two cents.

It is believed that this method will attain order, or build a big fat treasury.

Several students have stated that school would be quite an expensive affair if this rule was applied to all classes.
