

F. Finch Wins $95 Jack Pot At Theater

"Never", says Faye Finch, freshman, "has my name sounded so pretty as when it was called at the Bailey theater one night this month." That call entitled her to the $95 jack pot.

After having given five dollars of the $95 to a charity drive for the blind and one dollar to the little girl who drew her name, Faye decided to spend the remaining $89 for clothing-----mostly skirts and sweaters.

Faye asserts that her growth and the new style of longer dresses conflicting make it necessary to buy new clothes, and that the money will be an answer to this problem.

"I was sitting on the last seat of the row", relates Faye, "when I heard my name called. I was so surprised that I went through the space---about ten inches wide----between the seats and the side wall as I dashed up front. I didn't know I did it, and I don't think I could again."
