

Fashions, Fancies, And Frills-By Bernease Eatmon

During the bleak, sunless days of midwinter, every one longs to offset this drab season by using bright colors. One way to tone up a suit or dark dress is by using multi-colored scarves looped over the shoulders, tied around the neck, draped around hips as a tunic, or tied as a Buster Brown tie. Santa awarded many girls with these scarfs. Some of these were received by Fay Etta Langston, freshman; Patsy Lamm, senior; Ruth Farmer, junior; Miss Edith Farmer, senior home-room teacher; Mrs. Laurine Lassiter, junior homeroom teacher; Beth Bissette, senior; and Janice Brantley, junior.

A bright, perky hat will also give a lift at this season. Many a hat may be picked up on the January sales for a dollar.

This is the season, too, for wearing bright colored prints under a dark coat.

Idea: Pure white accompanies this season. Have you thought of making a coat out of a Navy medical blanket?

In keeping with the styles, Octavia Beard, Ruth Farmer, Patsy Lamm, and Sue Lassiter own black taffeta ballerina skirts. To give a longer appearance to her outfit, Sue wears black satin ballet shoes. Sue's skirt is approximately one and a half feet from the floor.

Beverly Jane Tapp, freshman, introduces a new style ballerina skirt. Her skirt is a grey wool flannel with red bound scallops. At the bottom, and in each scallop, a red flower is embroidered.

Practically all the students are parading the halls with many colored sweaters.

A zippered-pocket under the sleeve is an added attraction to sport coats.
