

These Jobs Aren't Any Fun Nor Are They Easy

Some of the jobs around school have been called "Back Breakers". Not only are they back breaking, but they are also tiresome and nerve-racking.

LUNCHROOM WORKERS

For example, the lunchroom workers stand on their feet from 8:40 until school is out and sometimes for an hour or two afterwards. Primary and grammar grade boys aid the workers in the lunchroom by carrying boxes of trash and canned goods to and from the cafeteria.

JOURNALISM STUDENTS

In the journalism department the tiresome job of "turning the crank" on the mimeograph makes Marilyn Lancaster feel as if her arm is coming off, so she reports. Another back breaking task of the paper is standing for hours upon hours bent over the mimeoscope. This is Bernese Eaton's regular job. Her assistants are Ben Etheridge and Willard Finch.

TYPING STUDENTS

The typing of stencils by

Millard Morgan, Sue Lassiter, Patsy Lamm, and Mrs. Laurine Lassiter is also a nerve-racking task.

TEEN-AGE LEADERS

Then there is the work "put out" on the teen-age parties. Miss Myra Edmundson, teacher, and Mr. Lewis Watson have to plan games, decorate the gym, and prepare refreshments. B.B.
