

The Eye Reveals More Than It Sees

The eye is a part of the body commonly used for seeing things. Our eyes are the most expressive of all the organs.

The eye is composed of many different parts. One of these is the iris, named, shall we say, for Iris, the rainbow goddess; for it is the iris that gives the eye its color. It is the colors that we most often see that gives us our viewpoint on life: red (fierceness, anger), green (envy), blue (calmness), or rose colors (happiness).

The color of the eye is said to carry a special meaning: brown signifies warmth; green, envy; blue, coolness or loyalty; black, depth. Many songs have been written about the col-
