

HERE AND NOW

Because the school children are needed for work at home, school is opening at 8:10 and closing at 2:30. It is hoped that this will eliminate a number of absences.

Improvements made on the school buildings and grounds before the carpenters left were patching the plaster; repairing the roof; replacing worn-out locks, broken window lights, and a gym door; painting in the gym; making steps at the west end of the building and a walk to the agriculture building; and putting a new lock on the front door.

As the school year draws to a close, college representatives visit the senior class in an attempt to interest seniors in attending the college represented. One representative from Hoyle's Secretarial College Raleigh, has already visited BHS seniors.

Juniors have ordered their rings from the Bal-four company. The rings will arrive next fall. Although most students ordered blue set, some ordered red.

O'Neals Grateful
For Given Aid

Mrs. M. E. O'Neal, lunchroom assistant this year until her husband became paralyzed, wishes to express her thankfulness to all the people who have been so generous with their aid.

Since it is impossible for the O'Neals to see every person and voice their thanks for their help since Mr. O'Neal became ill, they use this means as a way of reaching all.

Especially to the Men's Bible Class, of which Mr. O'Neal was a former member, to the women of the Methodist Church, and to the Masonic Organization, The O'Neals desire to express their appreciation for their assistance.

INDIVIDUALS

They are indebted also to a number of individuals of the community who have shown their interest by remembering them.

That there are around 6,000 professional golfers in the United States?

That the oldest examples of glasswork were found in Egyptian tombs 4,000 years ago?

That the planet Venus is believed to be warmer than the earth?

That recent research proves that leprosy, once thought to be the most contagious of all diseases, is actually less communicable than tuberculosis?

That George Fredrick Handel would take no money for his most famous oratorio "The Messiah," because he looked upon it as a miracle that lifted him out of despondency.

high school and 64 absentees in the grades.

Prospects: Mr. Weaver says, "I think the grade attendance is sufficient to keep the allotted teachers, but the high school will miss gaining an additional teacher by an average of five absentees per day".

No Saturday Lunches: "The low income on Saturdays did not justify the expense of meals and labor," states Mr. M. W. Weaver.
