

Cornelius Boykin

"To me his face bespeaks a clean, honest character," says Mrs. Howard Farmer about the freshmen's very admirable and well-mannered president, Cornelius Boykin. "Anytime I ask Cornelius to do something he does it willingly and co-operatively, but he needs to develop more initiative," Mrs. Farmer further remarks.

With his dignity and politeness, Cornelius, or Corney as he is better known by his many friends, has won the admiration of students and teachers alike. So great was the admiration for him that when he fell and cut the veins of his wrist, grief swept over the entire high school. Cornelius hopes to recover from this accident soon so that he will be able to play basketball when the county conference opens.

To begin his high school career, Corney received an honor that doesn't come to just any boy--escort for one of the Miss Bugle contestants.

When asked what he looked for most in a girl, Corney solemnly replied, "Honesty!"

He declares math is his favorite subject, and Miss

Jimmy Jones

Punctual, well-mannered, polite, ambitious, jolly, dependable--these are qualities that make the seniors proud of their president, Jimmy Jones.

Although Jimmy is a bass singer in glee club, an active church member, a member of the church choir, and has been president of his class since the seventh grade, he still has time for an interesting hobby, hunting.

"I'm not looking for her yet," says Jimmy, "but a typical mate for me must be kind, gentle, lovable, jolly, and easy to get along with."

Everyone in high school lists Jimmy as an admired friend and wishes him success in his planned business career. Lois Thigpen

Edith Farmer, teacher, says that Cornelius is an above-average student. She also states that he is superior to other students in manners, conduct, and thoughtfulness; and that he is not easily led astray by a gang.

In the eyes of the students and teachers, Corney is a model that other students could well pattern after.

Bobby Lamm

Eunice Perry

Surprisingly, behind Eunice Perry's quiet, solemn, meek attitude lies that feature everyone admires, dependability.

Art is this junior's hobby. Since she is so skilled in her artistic work, we are not surprised that home economics ranks first among her most-liked subjects, or that sewing holds second position in her most-enjoyed past time.

Eunice rated honor roll grades last month which fact is indicative of another asset of hers, a good student.

Declared Mrs. A. H. Farmer's assistant teacher for English III, "I experienced my happiest moment when I received a score of 75 on a drawing I copied from an advertisement inviting-'Draw me'." Eunice was given two free art lessons from the Art Instruction Corporation because of her grade.

After being asked what trait she most admired in a person, Eunice commented, "I like a person who will give up some of his own pleasures to make others happy, one who is considerate of others, and one who is unselfish."

Her responsibility again reveals itself as she assumes the duty of assistant librarian. M. P.