

Students Submit Themes To English Contest Sponsored By N.C. English Teachers

Six students submitted manuscripts to the Good Writing contest sponsored by the North Carolina English Teachers Association's Editorial Board and Composition Committee, under the direction of Dr. F. E. Bowman, of Duke University. The themes were written by four seniors, Anne Dunn, Lucinda Stott, Ed Pace, Bobby Lamm, and two juniors, Ruth Williams and Eunice Perry.

REGULATIONS

Students did not have any designated subject as their topic; personal experiences, however, were preferred. Regulations excluded name of teacher, school, or writer appearing on the written material.

Three readers, without a knowledge of the writer, school, or teacher, judge and select the best manuscripts. The papers judged best are published in Student Life, a special edition of the North Carolina English Teacher. Papers receiving second-place rating are given honorable mention.

PUBLICATION

Writers may request a letter of commendation to the director of admissions to the college they hope to enter.

Anne Dunn's theme has already been published in the Bugle. Each month there will appear one of the remaining five manuscripts.

This month it is Ed Pace's theme.

Charles Darnay And Sydney Carton --by Ed Pace

I recently read Charles Dickens' A TALE OF TWO CITIES. In this tragic story of Paris and London during the French Revolution, the author creates two characters, strikingly alike, strikingly unlike, Sydney Carton and Charles Darnay. In appearance both men are identical twins; both are well educated and possess a good background; but in morals and ambitions they are completely different. It is the author's handling of these characters and his use of their identical looks to give a
