

For an hour each day the assistant librarians shoulder their responsibilities without any complaint or without any compensation other than the joy that comes from public service; thus this paper feels it is time to give full credit and honor to these people.

Jan Perry, Mary Ann Edwards, Gordon Bissette, Jane Morgan, Eunice Perry, Ruth Williams, Sarah Peele, Reba Murray, Doris Murray, and Doris Faye Lamm render their services for an hour daily to check out books, renew books, receive books, keep books replaced on shelves, and keep an eye on the magazines and general upkeep of the study hall.

None of the librarians receive pay for their work in the library.

Mrs. A. H. Farmer, library supervisor, states that she couldn't ask for better co-operation from the assistant librarians.

When books are overdue, the librarians chase down the borrower. Also, the assistants make sure to get the fee charged for overdue books. This fee is used to replace supplies needed in the library.

Hats off to a very ambitious woman, Elizabeth Joyner! Although she dropped out of school in her senior year, 1935, to marry Roy Joyner, she returned to school last year and graduated in May, an honorary senior, along with 34 others.

This year, she comes to school twice weekly to complete a bookkeeping course not taught last year. With this post-graduate course she is equipping herself to accept a secretarial or bookkeeping position should she ever so desire.

Aside from her many household tasks, Elizabeth has time for interesting hobbies. One of these is flower gardening. She delights in growing beautiful varieties of flowers. Elizabeth also works on Saturdays in McClellan's in Wilson.

Great pride in her home often leads Elizabeth to paint, improve, and remodel, her home, and at small expense too.

Yes, Elizabeth the school girl, housewife, church worker, mother, and clerk, is an ambitious person.

We are very proud of Elizabeth, knowing that she will continue her good work with success.

Shirley Creech, sophomore, has a certain air of charm that many people envy. This tall hazel-eyed brunette, attractive in a quiet manner, is friendly toward everyone. Her friendliness is reflected in other's regards for her.

Although an active member of the glee club and church choir, she declares that reading is her hobby and states further that she enjoys caring for small children, since she has two young brothers.

One of Shirley's friends has this to say of her, "She has a fine personality."

Shirley takes great interest in her school work. When she graduated from grade school at Mt. Pleasant, she was salutatorian.

In a recent Speech Contest in Greenville, N. C., she and another BHS student tied for fifth place.

She and one of her closest friends, Barbara Nell Lamm, are planning to be home ec. teachers. Although they aren't sure of the college they will attend, they say it will be ECTC in Greenville, N. C., or Berry College in Ga.

"No matter which one we decide on, we want to go to the same college and teach near each other," continues these two friends.
