

Parents, Teachers, Students, Benefit From Open House

That Bailey students and teachers from the first grade through the twelfth can go all out to support an enterprise of their school was evidenced by the success of the Open House staged by the P. T. A. this month. That the parents can give their support equally as well was revealed in the record breaking attendance.

Students and teachers alike "pitched in" cooperatively to make it one of the most informative programs ever sponsored by the P. T. A.

Not only did this Open House let parents know what their children were doing but it also let outsiders know that a school is interested in programs other than athletics.

Student Body Displays Poor Conduct at P. T. A.

As our principal has so often reminded us, our school is judged by the conduct of the students.

On the night of the Open House, immediately after the program in the auditorium, several students showed their lack of good manners by rudely getting up and leaving the auditorium while the President was carrying on the business part of the P. T. A.

What an impression the outsiders got of the student body!

The name the person character of last month, Wiley Williamson, freshman, was not identified. No name the person character will appear in the future.

A Problem

An Easter corsage or a banquet corsage?

An Easter outfit or a new evening dress?

An Easter trip or a saving of money to carry "my" girl to the banquet?

A new coiffure for Easter or for the banquet?

These are some of the questions that the juniors and seniors are trying to solve as Easter and the banquet compete for the use of one's money.

Most people will wager that the banquet will win out--Time will tell.

Rays of Sunshine

Are we proud of Lois Jean Medlin, guard on the Bailey varsity basketball team, for receiving more votes for the All-Star team than any other forward or guard in Nash.

Everyone is having a nice "say" about Burley Dunn's biology display.

Compliments are heard frequently about the interesting exhibits, posters, and improvements in the library. The staff passes these on to the librarians, who are due the main credit.

While Mrs. Wade Joyner was absent from the lunchroom, Mrs. K. F. Lewis remarked, "I didn't realize how much "Ma" Joyner meant to the lunchroom until she was absent.
