

What If

BY WAYNE LAMM

Mary Ann were a FARMER
instead of a MILLER?

Julia were a CATCH instead of a HOOK?

The home-ec teacher were BAILEY instead of WILSON?

Mary Lou were a SHEEP instead of just a LAMM.

Someone could go uptown just one time without being caught?

Jean were a SEAMSTRESS

instead of a TAYLOR?

Hatterine were a KING instead of a PRINCE?

Jean were HOUSES instead of BARNES?

"Boss" were PUMPS instead of WELLS?

Rufus were WHISKERS instead of BEARD?

Clark were a STEP instead of a PACE?

The Green Hornets won a trophy this year?

No one knows the different kinds of people poor little me has to put up with. Raving students slap my face when they get mad with me as though I didn't have any feeling at all.
They hit my fingers so hard they get all hung up with each other. My arms are thrown back so hard they nearly break in two.
Spacing me from one side to the other is like music to them, not realizing how tired I get.

Then there are the tender ones who are kind to me.
Their little soft fingers touch my cold ones as if they were afraid mine would break if they touch hard. I'm not tired anymore; they make me forget what you storming mad students did to me. My keys go clickity click with the most beautiful rhythm you have ever heard. They realize I'm a great help in getting their work done speedily. J. L.
