

Our Principal, A Friend

If it's the little things that count, the students of Bailey High should take their hats off to Principal Weaver.

His car is at the services of any sick student needing to be carried home, any other student who has a good reason for using his car, or any student who is left by his school bus. What would the bus drivers do while waiting for their checks if Mr. Weaver wouldn't grant them a loan. Other students, too, come in for loans.

If no bus driver substitutes are available, Mr. Weaver is ready to drive one bus. Who would haul supplies from the superintendent's office if Mr. Weaver should ignore the responsibility? Here teachers as well as students are indebted to our principal. Sometimes Mr. Weaver takes players and cheerleaders to ball games.

ADDED SUBJECTS

In order to offer all the subjects he would like to get in, Mr. Weaver has to add teaching to his duties as a principal.

While our principal was in high school, he decided to take teaching as his profession. He didn't mind studying and liked the type of work. Once, though, he thought he would like to try something else, but was back before the year was out.

TWENTIETH YEAR

This is his twentieth year of sharing secrets, joys, and sorrows along with his students.

Eunice Perry

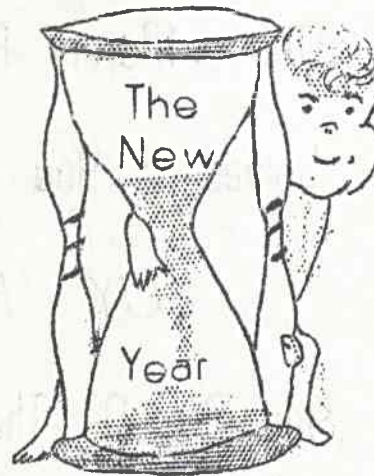

Illness Decreases Attendance

Continued from page 14

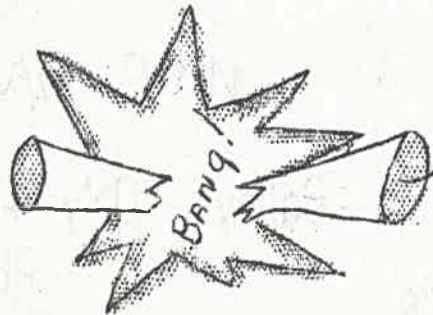

Seventh grade: Mary Ella Glover, Malcolm Bowen, Beebe Eatmon, Sonja Manning, Violet Cooley, Keith Wick, Yvonne Meacomes, Faye McKeel, Lane Farmer, Rabon Manning, Louise Wells, and Bobby Lou Batts.

Eight grade: Henry Brantley, Mack Burgess, Joe Earp, Billy Ruffin, Helen Boyette, Jo Ann Bunn, Willistine Cooley, Elsie Ray Eatmon, Sonja Lamm, Lucille McKeel, Cherry Pace, and Joyce Thompson.

START

off with a

by a visit to our store

Bridgers Paint & Wallpaper Company

Wilson,

N.C.