

Fashion Trends — — — — — Jackie Vicke

Parties are still in full swing, banquets will begin to pop up, and more and more gay weekend festivities loom ahead. All this makes us want to know the fashions that will flatter us most and really be fashionable.

Clothes for those occasions do not have to be extremely expensive. Just a little ingenuity and presto! you have an entirely different dress. Take a party dress you already have, add insertions of gold or silver metallic threads, rhinestones, or something to brighten the dress, and there is your "new" dress. By all means, though, get some expert advice on this remodeling so you won't overdo brightening the garment. NO gaudiness, please!

FORMALS

For banquets or other formal festiveness, an evening dress is the appropriate thing to wear, naturally. In choosing such a dress, get a soft color that complements you. Although they may be pretty on someone else, certain colors do not "fit" you. Do not select flashy, drab, loud, uncomplementary colors. They will contrast terribly with the gowns of the others who have chosen wisely.

ADDED TIPS

When wearing your party dresses and evening gowns, don't detract from the loveliness by wearing heavy jewelry or extra strong perfume.

Wear your waist corsages with stems pointing toward the floor. The shoulder corsages should be worn with stems pointing toward the waist.
