

Extra Activities Add Spice To School

Elsewhere in this paper is an article about a person who is not only a good student but who takes part in numerous activities as well. More students need to do likewise.

Students who want to see their school grow into a better place participate in school activities. If lessons are prepared at home, then they have an opportunity to indulge in glee club, F. H. A., 4H, F. F. A., and athletic sports without falling behind the others in classwork.

To take part in these clubs will make a student more well-rounded, give him training in leadership, "followship", and in meeting other people and working with them.

It is these extracurricula activities that often add spice to the school's day, that make school-appeal to many students, and that help give the school its name far and wide.

Do We Practice What We Know?

How many years of English have we had? How many of us put into practice from day to day what we learn? Many of us have taken eleven and twelve years of English, but do we show it by our speech?

People frequently judge us by our speech. Every time we open our mouth we bespeak what we know or, at least, whether we show an interest in indicating what we know by what we say.

Our speech will never improve until we become interested enough to try to speak correctly whether we are in the halls, gymnasium, classroom, home, or at social gatherings.

By recognizing and correcting our mistakes, we will find our speech improving from day to day.

Between The Covers

Since this column has been dealing with serious books for several months, now is a good time to enjoy the lighter side of printed pages.

If you want a good over-the-week-end book, see that it is Morley's PARNASSUS ON WHEELS. This is a simple, amusing story of a traveling book seller printed in good-sized type.

The reader rides on Parnassus, the old wagon that is completely equipped for living room, bed room, and kitchen, and has fun helping Helen, the new owner, sell books.

Helen has quite an adventure in her short book-selling career, and every student would like to share it with her. E. P.

Les Echos Francais. QUICK AS A FLASH!!!

On February 28 the seniors visited Raines & Cox Studio to have their pictures taken for the Senior Edition of the Bugle. The next Monday, Mr. Cox arrived at Bailey High with the proofs.

WHAT NEXT???

The school now has a popcorn machine in the supply room. Students may buy popcorn after lunch period.

ABOUT THE BANQUET---

One morning when the juniors were on English class with one senior present, Mrs. Farmer in discussing some work to be done before the banquet, said, "The Junior-Senior Banquet will be"--all heads shot to attention-- "sometime between now and May 19'."

Odds And Ends

WISHES---

Tommy Glover: I wish this geometry was as sticky as molasses. Maybe it would stick in my mind longer! FRENCH OR ENGLISH???

During the mad rush in getting out the last issue of the Bugle, Reba Whitley pinned the dummy copy of the F. H. A. page on the front page stencil of the
