

Recipe For A Husband - - - - - Frances Carroll

What kind of husband would you choose? The theme below is a general opinion of the third year home ec. girls resulting from home ec. discussion.

Most girls will say, "The man I marry must be tall, dark, handsome, and have plenty of money." This is not a true picture of a husband.

I want my husband to have many good qualities, but not so many as to be perfect, because that's the impossible. If it weren't, I wouldn't want a perfect mate; he would be "too good for me".

I should very much like him to stand on his own two feet, make his decisions, and answer for himself.

I'd like him to be well groomed, but definitely not afraid of a work shirt. He will be neat in his appearance as well as in the things he does.

Personality traits of the desirable kind almost make up the ideal husband. Such qualities will help him get along with me as well as my friends and relatives.

Along with respect for me, I hope he will have a deep love for children, which will make our marriage more complete.

Methodist, or whatever denomination, my husband and I must have a great spiritual faith to go forward in this world.

A girl will have ever right to happiness if she marries a man with these qualities--many of them at least.

My mate will not be jealous but have a trust in me as his truthful wife. He will not doubt my word or give me reason to deceive him.

It matters not if he is rich, but I will want him to be capable of giving me some comforts of life. He will enjoy his work and want me to share it with him, whether it be farming or banking.
