

Luther Burbank--Farmboy Becomes Famous

Burbank was a famous American plant breeder and horticulturist. He wanted to improve every plant he grew. He learned the inherited traits of different species and tried to improve each new crop.

The Burbank potato was one of many varieties which resulted from his experiments with seed pods of potato plants. Burbank achieved results by crossing and selection.

The former process is the uniting of two plants to produce a third. He brought about this union by placing the pollen of one flower upon the stigma of another.

Burbank created many new kinds of flowers. Probably his great Shasta Daisy has aroused more interest than all of his other flowers. The Shasta Daisy is the off-spring of the English Daisy, the wild American Daisy, and their pure white Japanese cousin. S. Webb

Bookmending Keynote Of Library Activities

Mending books, making attractive bulletin boards, and discarding library material boxes are the library highlights for the month.

Main keynote is the mending of books. Miss Idalia Oglesby reports that 77 books have received a new face, which brings the total repaired to 142.

Four freshmen girls--Janice Edwards, Betty Lou Stallings, Sue Bunn, Shirley Williams--have aided the librarian in this work.

Before the Open House, Miss Oglesby decorated the library with bulletins featuring books that every
