

T. V. Brightens Classwork

Mrs. M. W. Weaver's fourth grade entertained the fourth and fifth with a "Television" program last Friday.

The program, Strange Interests In Central China, was presented to the group by the class. The speeches, given by a few of the students, came to the class room over the sound system. Other members of the class, using the "television set", demonstrated various means of transportation used by the Chinese.

The "television set" was card board boxes covered with canvas cloth and designed by members of the class.

My Life's Story

In Nash County in the state of North Carolina on April 14, 1940, a darling little red-headed girl was born named Shirley Faye. I weighed about eight and a half pounds. My parents' names are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Williams. They were very proud of me.

As the months went by I grew to be a healthy little girl, and at the age of nine months I was walking.

I continued to grow without having any sickness. At the age of six I started to school. I hadn't been in school very long when I became ill with measles and chickenpox. I missed only a couple of days from school and was back again.

In the following grades I made honor roll grades with only two absentees from school. At the closing of school last year I was promoted to the sixth grade and here I am doing good work, hoping to be in the seventh grade this fall.

When I grow up I would like to be a secretary or housewife.

After using crutches for four weeks, Judy Smith is now able to walk without them.

Because of illness, Lois Jean Eatmon, sixth grader, missed her second day of school since entering the first grade.
