

Tips For Teens..... B. Finch, P. Liles

As our high school is crowded this year, many of us are sharing lockers with a fellow student. To be a considerate, obliging locker-mate is a good insurance for friendship.

It's courteous to take turns using the most convenient spots in the locker and also thoughtful to suggest that whoever gets to school first hang his coat on the back hook, leaving the front hook for the late arrival. Even better, we might consider using choice hooks and shelves for a certain length of time and switch occasionally for best results.

Keep the locker clear of unnecessary articles so that we will have plenty of room for things we need.

Be sure it is locked at all times and before closing it, be certain our locker-mate has his books.

Another little act that reveals our thoughtfulness of others is the opening and closing of our lockers as quietly as we can and avoiding some of the loud laughing and talking at lockers during the changing of classes.

Junior Roll Increases

Christine Fowler, junior, joined the junior class, December 30, when she moved from Middlesex, to make her home in Bailey.

She enrolled in Bailey High School in the seventh grade and remained here until the first semester of her sophomore year.
