

Juniors Soon To Dip Into Class Treasury

The junior class treasury has grown from $96.64 to $700.00, this year, principally by means of magazines sales and drink concessions at home basketball games. The earning is over; the spending will start soon.

During their freshmen and sophomore years the present junior class paid class dues of five cents a week, thus gaining a total of $96.64 to start off the junior year.

By receiving $369.66 from magazine sales, $200.00 from drink concessions, and $34.64 from class dues this year, the class now has a total of $700.00.

The first dip into this treasury will be to pay for the Junior-Senior Banquet this spring.

In the senior year the class will continue to spend its money as it presents the class day exercises, pays commencement speakers, and leaves a gift to the school.

Advisors Draw UP Rules Governing N.Y. Trip

Regulations given by the advisors to the journalists and their parents offer a suggested list of the clothes needed and state in detail the rules of conduct required.

Clean, neat suits or wool dress or sweaters and skirts-not necessarily expensive-comfortable shoes, and no flashy jewelry are named "musts."

As to behavior the requirements are punctuality and lady-gentleman-like conduct at all times.

Stork Finds Home For New Arrivals'

This month's "new arrivals", personifying the new books received in the library, were flown in under Mr. Stork's bill and promptly hung on the library bulletin board by MISS IDALIA OGLESBY, librarian. The incident indicated that the stork found the right home.

MISS OGLESBY arranged this scene by placing two small dolls in a handkerchief tied around the stork's bill and pinning the new books' covers underneath.

Names of the new books displayed are Sir Walter Raleigh, College and You, That Darned Minister's Son, Elizabeth, and Mrs. Mike, Pattern For Penelope, Soldier of Democracy, The Land and People of Japan, Explaining The Atom, and Mediterranean Spotlights.
