

Between The Covers

-by-

Clara Lee Stone

Spring has been declared officially by the seniors of our school by beginning a study of great poets and their poems. William Wordsworth, the English nature poet, Robert Burns, the Scottish nature poet who sprinkles his verses with words of wisdom, and numerous others have helped us to tip our hats and to welcome spring with all her golden-green beauty.

"Lines Written in Early Spring" and "The Tables Turned" are poems that have made us have a feeling of appreciation for the beauties of "God's World."

"The Tables Turned" was especially liked by our group because it was a poem inviting us to throw away our books and let nature be our teacher. I think in many cases this poem "hit close to home" because with such beautiful weather, it's hard to keep one's mind on the dull white pages of a book.

"Lines Written in Early Spring" is a poem that describes a walk in a meadow and the way nature can make a man forget his worries and just feel good all over.

Reading poetry is a good way to catch the spring mood. If you don't believe it, try it.

Tenth Grade Secures Fries For Chapel Program

Enjoyment found through having a hobby was demonstrated by C. H. Fries, Jr., assistant Nash County superintendent, to the student body this month. Ben Wethington's tenth grade was responsible for Fries's conducting the chapel program.

COLLECTION

According to him, he started collecting harmonicas during his high school days and still finds pleasure in playing them "for himself or for others."

Fries showed and played many different sizes of harmonicas. Besides giving musical numbers, he illustrated tricks and told stories.

Sophomores Have Parties At Park

On March 20, Ben Wethington's tenth grade held a wiener roast at the Wilson Park. The students used the playground equipment for their recreation. After the wiener roast part of the students went to see a movie; the others returned home.

Roasted wieners, marshmallows, and drinks composed the menu of Miss Idalia Oglesby's tenth grade's party March 31, at the Wilson Park.

After the wiener roast they went to see a movie.

Sure, you think right is on your side. He thinks it's on his side. Swell! But better make sure the "right" you mean is not a "right hook!" If there's an argument let those who are experienced decide. That's why we have judges and juries.

It's Not What You Do

Same idea goes with your drycleaning, too. It takes a professional to do an economical job. Tip off your wife that she can save a load of time and hard work by using our low cost service. Give you both more free time, too!

It's The Way You Do It

BAILEY DRY CLEANERS