

Upper Classman Attend State College Day

Participating in the varied program of events presented at North Carolina State College last Saturday for high school junior and senior boys and their parents from the entire State were a number of boys from Bailey.

Chancellor Carey H. Boston invited the high school juniors and seniors and their parents to be the guests of the college during the day-long observance, which had been designated as "North Carolina State College Day."

The visitors were guests of the college at the Davidson, N. C. State basketball game.

HIGHLIGHTS

Highlights of the afternoon program were tours of the Schools of Agriculture, Design, Education Engineering, Forestry, and Textiles, and informal talks by college representatives on the work of the institution and its allied divisions.

VISITORS GIVEN ASSISTANCE
Accompanying the visiting high school students and their parents on the tours were professors, other staff members, and State College students, who were on hand throughout the day to assist the visitors whenever possible.

Practice teachers Dean and Byrd of the Bailey Agricultural department, accompanied the boys to the college. Boss Wells joined them in the afternoon.

What's In A Name?

----- Carolyn Finch

Attention, girls and boys of Bailey High! We bring again this month "What's in a Name?"

This time it's a small sketch of each of the presidents guiding the high school classes.

Senior president, JERRY PERRY, has a name whose very pronunciation bespeaks his usually quiet, mannerly ways and helpful attitude in the community and at school.

MARSHALL HIGH, junior president, is leading the junior class High through a tough year. As a High he has set high ambitions for his class.

Sophomore B president JOAN BRANNON, "brans num" to do her job but tackles it wholeheartedly, be it guiding the class, preparing class work, or playing basketball.

Evidently the name McKEEL bespeaks leadership and likeableness as the presidents of sophomore A and freshmen A are LUCILLE and FAYE respectively.

JAMES WELLS, freshman B president, by his constant joking wells up howls of laughter from his hearers.

Deep waters may run smooth, but in his case they bubble.

Flag Raising

Student members of the Boy Scouts are to be given credit for raising the flag at the top of the school building and taking it in every afternoon.
