

Seniors Meet Dead Lines; Give Reports To Class

Seniors have met the deadlines for all source themes. The last themes were due this week.

After each student had turned in his theme, he made a report on it to the class in order to share the knowledge he had gained with the class.

Included among the subjects reported on were Shakespeare, the man, his characters and plays; Chaucer and his Canterbury Tales; a number of great English novels; English cathedrals and theaters; different periods of English literature; the effect of the Crusades upon literature, and others.

'Grades Up; Conduct Down' Say Teachers

Teachers report that their registers reveal that conduct grades for the past reporting period have increased but that grades are "slightly" better.

Four out of six of the high school homeroom teachers by comparing records of the first and second grading periods gave proof that conduct points have increased.

Five out of the six, when asked about the grades in comparison with last month's, replied, "There's a slight improvement, but still they're nothing to brag about."
