

Long To Be Remembered

BY PEGGY LILES

Nothing will be able to erase from the memory of Ann Earp, Louise Davis, J. R. Massey, Annie Ruth Brown, Robert Haskins, Brenda Sue Stallings, Mrs. R. M. Meacomes, Miss Francis Wilson, Mrs. Laurine Lassiter, and me President Bayar's visit to this community, for that day was OUR lucky day.

After shaking hands with Mrs. Bayar, Ann Earp declared, "I'll never wash my hand again"; she also commented on the softness of Mrs. Bayar's plump hand.

Louise Davis, with her wholesome and natural beauty, attracted the attention of a group of the Turkish men who called her over to their car for an introduction. Louise said they told her, "We want to meet an American girl to see what she is like."

FIRST HAND SHAKE

The first person to have the pleasure of shaking President Bayar's hand, after he stepped off the car and was greeted by Congressman Cooley, was J. R. Massey.

Annie Ruth Brown also shook the President's hand, while Robert Haskins and Brenda Sue Stallings received a gentle pat on the head.

Possibly those of us who received the biggest thrill of the day were Mrs. R. M. Meacomes, Miss Frances Wilson, and I for being singled out for special honors, presenting gifts to President and Mrs. Bayar.

Mrs. Meacomes presented the President with a flag and a plaque of North Carolina.

Miss Wilson gave Mrs. Bayar a bouquet of lovely red roses.

I had the utmost pleasure in presenting to the President a copy of our school paper.

MAYOR'S REMARKS

Mayor M. H. Griffin will possibly never forget his introductory speech, especially since it has received so many compliments. Many have said that every word was appropriate, and the comparison of Bailey community with Turkey was very "well said."

No doubt the committees responsible for making the great visit possible will never forget their efforts put forth.

The same could be said, we have an idea, of Congressman Cooley, who fought vigorously to have the stop made official in spite of opposition.

SHOCK

About five minutes before the President arrived Mrs. Lassiter made her last round through the building. Upon reaching her room, she was struck with horror because the workers had begun to repair the broken plaster. She was almost panicky and felt her efforts of cleaning were all in vain.

We don't imagine we would be wrong in saying everyone present will "Long Remember" the thrill he received this particular morning.

Trip To CSPA Includes More Than Work

In addition to attending numerous classes at Columbia University, the Bugle staff had a program of entertainment and sightseeing scheduled for all spare moments.

Their first stop was at Washington, D. C., where they visited Pohick Church, Mount Vernon, Congressman Harold Cooley's office, the Capitol, the Library of Congress, and spent the night at the Ebbitt Hotel.

ENTERTAINMENT

In New York, their night entertainment included "The King And I," "Wonderful Town," "Cinerama," and an evening at Radio City Music Hall.

During the day the staff was taken on a four-hour lecture tour of the city, visited the Statue of Liberty, and shopped in the downtown stores.

Saturday noon the students and advisers attended the CSPA banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

COST

The trip cost each student a total of $65.25. Of this amount, the Bugle fund paid $28.00, leaving each student to pay $37.25.

Every member of the staff agrees that it was not necessary for anyone to spend any extra money while she was gone. What each did spend was for purchasing personal souvenirs.

Oscar Creech of Chowan College gave the seniors an "inspiring" talk this week.
