Tips For Homemakers

Making one's self ready for adulthood is important to every youth, especially to a young homemaker. Her most prized possession in her youth is her appearance, which shows in her clothing and individual appearance.

Several mistakes girls make in dress and appearance are poor posture, fly-away hair, crude makeup, tacky jewelry, sagging hem, and run down heels. All these defects can easily be corrected.

A girl's hair is her crowning glory and should be treated so. Neat appearance is a girl's asset to charm. Weekly shampooing and nightly brushing tend to bring our scalp oils, giving shine and highlights.

It is seldom a teen-age girl needs more make-up other than powder and lipstick. Good eating habits and cleanliness do away with most facial blemishes and give the rosy complexion and clear eyes girls desire. Acne, however, may need a doctor's care.

Hours may be spent on the care of clothing but this effort can easily be disguised by poor posture. (This article will continue in the May issue.)

Bailey Chapter Attends St. Convention

Bailey had its quota of delegates attending the State Convention on Sat., April 3, in Raleigh. The theme of the convention was "Better Homes for Tomorrow's Future."

During the morning program a North Carolina FHA flag was presented, which is the second state FHA flag in the US.

The "most enjoyable parts of the program," according to the delegates, were group singing, led by Dr. A. E. Hoffman, state music supervisor, and the guest speaker, Dr. Bill Martin, Jr., "The Winston Storyteller." Dr. Martin kept the crowd entertained with his stories.

Jean Faulkner of Red Oak, state FHA president, presided over the convention. The 1954-55 officers were installed during the afternoon program.
