Statistics Portray Picture Of School

"Basic facts often present a picture of the school that opens our eyes to its strength and its weakness," declares one teacher.

In the first issue of the BUGLE some relevant facts were presented. A further study has revealed a number not mentioned in that article.

Two figures not generally known are those of the income and expenditure of the school. Last year the school took in $29,516.21. It paid out $29,011.70.

Although the school has new library books, a new elementary library, new types of lighting, four teachers with Master Degrees, and many more assets, the students, points out the teachers, are failing to do required work.

COST OF ABSENCES

By being absent the students' greatest loss is to themselves. There are a number of ways, too, the principal reminds students and parents, in which absences are a cost to the school: Causes a great deal of re-teaching, cuts down on average daily attendance that affects teacher allotment; causes students to form bad habits; causes subject
