

Not Popular?---Yet We Wonder Why.

By---Bobbie Lou Batts

Rude Manners, a senior, is brother to Inconsiderate, a freshman. Rude's sisters are Careless and Thoughtless Manners, junior and sophomore respectively. The other day we had a visitor. Her impression of Rude and his brother and sisters was, I am sorry to say, not at all a good one. They have their relatives in every school though, if that's any consolation.

During home room period, the Manners talked while the teacher was calling the roll and sat whispering about their classmates until the bell sounded. Here is the way they acted the remainder of the day: FIRST PERIOD: Again there is talking, whispering, and raucous laughter. Rude makes remarks about the teacher's writing, remarks so audible the teacher hears them. After the bell he goes to his locker. He pushes everyone else out of his way and closes his neighbor's locker just after he has opened it.

SECOND PERIOD: He sits and talks. He refuses even to open his book.

THIRD PERIOD: Half-way the hour he asks the time and wishes aloud that it was time for lunch.

(Next month there will be more about this family.Ed.)
