

Sr. Girls Competing In Homemaker Contest

Nine senior girls took the examination this month for the Betty Crocker Search for the All American Homemaker of Tomorrow given throughout the nation to any interested senior girl.

The purpose of the contest is to find the Homemaker Of Tomorrow from each school.

General Mills, the sponsor of this test, is endeavoring "to focus public attention on what schools are doing to prepare young women for the future, and to demonstrate how homemaking can be as rewarding and glamorous as any other career."

All examinations will be graded in Chicago by Science Research Associates. Winners of each school will receive a gold pin and a Betty Crocker cook book.

Each state winner will receive a $1,500 scholarship, a gold jewelled pin, a complete set of the Encyclopedia Britannica for her school, and a trip with her school advisor to the national award dinner in Philadelphia, April 21. This trip will also include a tour of Washington, D. C., and colonial Williamsburg, Virginia.

The nation-wide winner's scholarship will be increased to $5,000, and she will receive a specially designed gold pin.

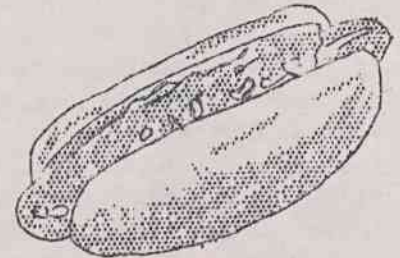

Out of the 187 enrolled in Bailey High, there are eleven Eatmons, eleven Lamms, nine Vicks, seven Williamses, six Glovers.
