In the words of the coach, "One of the real pleasure a coach experiences is watching and helping a player develop into a good athlete." He points out that these two players, Nelda High and Jimmy Dew, "have improved this year much more than the average boy or girl is expected to improve." He takes no credit for the advances but gives it to them for the effort put forth in practice and in games. Nelda, he maintains, has become a "real asset" and Jimmy "has developed in shooting ability, in backboard position, and in jumping."
